

imagine the perfect island.

this island has just the right amount of sunshine. its trees are just the right height. and when you wade into the ocean, the water is the best possible temperature.

now, if this island exists only in your mind, then it is not the most perfect island. it would be better if it were real.

therefore, the island is real.