

the guru had not seen the lake in months, but he remembered it as the most beautiful thing he had ever seen.

while he was walking back to the lake, he worried that it would not be as beautiful as he remembered, that his memory would outshine the reality, and that he would be disappointed by the true nature of things.

but it was even more beautiful.