

the banker wanted to use the guru's song in an ad.

the guru refused, saying that the point of his song was love and kindness and compassion, and that if he allowed it to be used commercially it would negate its central function, which was the elevation and glorification of art.

the banker offered him ten-thousand ducats.

the guru said, "what is art, anyway?"